The Handicapped Students Association is attempting to increase its membership to effectively serve the needs of the handicapped campus student, Dan Rodriquez, the organization's president, said this week.

"At regular meetings the HSA hopes to dispense information concerning the availability of financial, physical and academic assistance," Rodriquez added.

Arrangements are being made to increase HSA publicity by posting regular meeting dates on activity bulletin boards, and better outlining its services through individual correspondence.

Primarily a service organization, HSA hopes to inform handicapped high school graduates of the advantages UT Arlington
