ACHIEVING A GOAL

Here's a game plan of things you will do to achieve a goal. The rules you should follow to achieve your goal are:

RULE I. Define your goal.

RULE II. What steps do you need to take to achieve this goal?

RULE III. Put steps in order from least to most difficult. Make the last step your goal.

RULE IV. Set a reasonable deadline for each step.

RULE V. Work on each step until it is completed.

RULE VI. Review and revise to simplify your steps if necessary.

RULE VII. Achieve.

RULE VIII. Decide on a new goal.

16. Compare your findings about the job with your Self Assessment.
   Do I qualify?_______ If not, why not? ____________________
   Would I be happy with this job?_______ If not, why not? _____
Assess skills before job hunt

Employers are skeptical of a "superperson." Claiming you can do "anything" not only will fail to convince an employer of your qualifications, but may actually prejudice the employer against you. The employer wants to know specifically what you can do and how your skills and abilities can be used most profitably in the organization.

Therefore, as the first step in merchandising your job talents, you should make a detailed, realistic inventory of your qualifications, interests and any of your limitations. You should know what you can do and what you cannot do and how your skills and abilities can be used most profitably in the organization.

To begin your self-evaluation, ask yourself a few simple, basic questions:

A. What jobs have I had?
B. What did I like about each? What did I dislike?
C. What are my work qualifications?
D. What does my education qualify me for?
E. What are my real interests?
F. Do I have any special talents or aptitudes? (For example, play musical instrument)

G. Does my physical condition limit me in any way?
H. What kind of job do I want?
Now put your thoughts on paper. If you are marketing your skills for a particular type of position, the following personal inventory questions will be helpful when you have a job interview. If you are seeking a professional or office position, a chart using these questions will systematize your thinking for the preparation of a resume of your qualifications.

Write down descriptions of and answers to the following on a piece of paper:

- Previous jobs, dates and reasons for leaving
- Characteristics I liked most about each job
- Characteristics I disliked about each job
- What work I do best?
- What special knowledge or information do I have?
- What equipment can I use?
- What diplomas, degrees, certificates, specializations do I have?
- What business, vocational, apprenticeship, on-the-job training have I had?
- Which courses or training did I like best? Why?
- Which did I dislike? Why?
- What do I consider an ideal job for me?
- What are my chances of getting it?
- What kinds of jobs do I dislike?
- What are my hobbies?
- How can I relate my hobbies to a job?
- What special talents or aptitudes do I have?
- What do I learn most readily?
- Does my physical condition limit me in any way?
- Is it necessary for me to change my occupation?
- How long a job search can I finance?
- Occupational goal:

Considering all the foregoing information, list the three jobs for which you feel at this time you are best qualified and which you would prefer. List them in order of your preference.

1. Name of job
   Why interested
2. Name of job
   Why interested
3. Name of job
   Why interested

Some things to remember BEFORE you call:

1. Have the correct phone number.
2. Have your Personal Data Sheet with you. Who knows what you'll be asked.
3. Have a pen and paper with you to write down information. Employers don't like to "hold on just a minute" while you hunt for them.
4. Speak clearly and slowly. Make sure your brain is in gear before putting your mouth into motion.
5. Use a phone where there are no distractions such as a loud radio, TV, elephants, wrestling match, etc.
6. Be courteous and polite.
7. Do not have anything in your mouth (cigarettes, gum, tobacco, etc.)
8. When you are finished with your call hang the receiver up lightly. Don't shatter the potential employer's eardrum.

Making the call:

1. My name is ____________________________.
2. I am calling about your ad in the paper for the ________ position.
3. Has that position been filled?
4. Are you still accepting applications?
5. I have had experience working at ________ where I did ________, ________, ________, and ________.
6. When may I come in for an interview?
7. What is the address?
8. Whom should I ask to see?
9. Thank you, I will see you at _______ on _______.

THE DOZEN

In a survey, these were listed as the 12 most important features an employer looks for when he is hiring an employee. Here they are in the order of their importance:

1. ABILITY
2. DEPENDABILITY
3. HONESTY
4. INITIATIVE
5. RELIABILITY
6. PERSERVERANCE
7. GOOD ATTENDANCE
8. EFFICIENCY
9. LOYALTY
10. CHEERFULNESS
11. HELPFULNESS
12. UNSELFISHNESS

Do you have these qualities? How can you develop them?
Job Interviews: Special Concerns of Disabled Individuals

1. What employers often think
A. Consider individuals' limitations, instead of their abilities
B. Worry about accidents
C. Worry about rates they pay for insurance

2. Behaviors which disabled individuals can exhibit during the interview
A. Discuss the disability early in the interview, especially if it is visually apparent
   1.) Use clear, easy to understand terms
   2.) Do not use medical or psychological jargon
   3.) Explain your disability in such a way that the interviewer knows you can do the job
   4.) Try to describe your problem with positive qualities
B. Describe how the disability occurred a.) Congenital
   b.) Accidental injury
      (1) A long time ago
      (2) Recently
   c.) Disease
C. Describe any physical limitations a.) Standing b.) Sitting c.) Walking d.) Lifting e.) Visual f.) Hearing
   g.) Speech
   h.) Breathing
      (1) Allergies
      (2) Out-of-breath
   i.) Coordination
      (1) Eye-hand
      (2) Eye-foot
   j.) Finger dexterity
      (1) Fine
      (2) Gross
D. Describe the condition of your disability a.) Improving b.) Not changing
   c.) Progressive (rate at which it is getting worse)

8.) Discuss how you have been able to compensate for your disability 9.) Discuss your good vocational record a.) Few days missed due to illness b.) Arrive early for work
   c.) Present facts about quantity and quality of previous work 10.) Discuss your reliable source of transportation or your ability to drive 11.) Demonstrate special skills you have developed to compensate for your disability a.) Use of prosthetic devices b.) Use of wheelchair

   c.) Other unique skills

12.) Discuss architectural barriers, if they are going to be a problem a.) Doorways
   b.) Curbs c.) Stairs
   d.) Elevators
   e.) Parking spaces near place of work

3. Always stress your abilities and qualifications, not your limitations, regardless of your disability
   A. Face reality and discuss the problem
   B. Stress positive aspects which you have learned to use to compensate for your disability

4. Discuss your vocational objectives
   A. Short-term
   B. Intermediate
   C. Long-range

5. Discuss specific experiences which you have had that better enable you to perform the job which you are seeking
   A. Personal
   B. Educational
   C. Work experience
   D. Training

6. Use references who will present your disability as favorably as possible
First impressions important

A good application letter can open doors

When you’re looking for a job, qualifications aren’t everything; communicating your qualifications is everything. Based on my experience in reading job applications and teaching job-hunting workshops, I have found that many people fail to get across their skills. If you follow a few guidelines about letters and resumes, you can increase your chances of landing a job.

1. Mention the job you are applying for in your letter. Organizations often have many openings. If you say, as more than one person has, “Please consider me for the opening you have advertised,” the employer may not know which opening you are applying for.

2. Sell yourself in your letter. To say only “Please review my resume in light of your needs” is at best neutral. Rather, think of the application as a sales campaign to get you an interview. Show how you can contribute: “If you want to hire someone who can work well with the public, then you will be interested in my experience in customer relations” (or organizing community projects or working on the school board).

Tailor each letter to the specific job. One woman, in applying for a job as a manager trainee for a finance company, emphasized her college courses in finance and accounting and her experience in collections. When she applied for a job as a jewelry store manager, she focused on her retail experience and her general business courses.

End your letter with a sales pitch. Even if you are not an extrovert, now is the time to write: “I will call your office on May 5 to arrange a brief meeting.”

3. Emphasize how your capabilities fit the needs of the employer. One of the most common mistakes applicants make is to focus on their own needs. If your major qualification is that you love the area of the country or think that you would enjoy that kind of work or have lots of hobbies, you will not receive an enthusiastic response. Even if you do not have experience in the specific job advertised, show how the experience you have is related to the job.

Many people have developed skills in the course of volunteer work — they have organized committees, chaired drives and supervised workers. These may be just the qualifications an employer wants, but unless you mention them, you’ll go unnoticed.

In both your letter and resume, then, mention qualifications that are relevant to the job. If you are seeking a job as administrative assistant, for example, statements like, “Supervised 12 volunteers in Cancer Society drive,” “Two years of successful experience in detailed record-keeping,” and “Strong capabilities in writing business letters and reports” show what you can do for an employer.

4. Be specific. Do not simply write, “Volunteer work gave me experience working with people and organizing projects.” Add a couple of examples: “For the past four years I have been youth director for our church. As a member of the committee to develop a public library, I assisted in planning the new library for our community. If you write only that you were a “lab researcher,” the employer will not know whether you cleaned the Bunsen burners or designed the experiments.

5. Include only information which will support your goal. Much personal information — the color of your hair and eyes, for example — is irrelevant in a resume. One applicant for a counseling job at a college added that she had “an interest in the Department of Recreation and would like to pursue my interests in my own time.” It was a sentence better left out.

6. Always make your letter and resume attractive, clear and correct. I will never forget the person who sent a printed resume with a hole where she had cut out the address originally printed. Above the hole she had typed in a different address. The example is extreme — it has happened.

If you have some basic information, you will write a better application — you will know, for example, what the organization does or makes. You will also avoid little errors that can make a difference. (For example, you apply to Ozark Air Lines, but Trans World Airlines).

If you find out that the last person on the job could not motivate employees, you can give a little extra emphasis to your skills in this area in your application.

The preceding story was written by E. Michael Walsh, Ph.D., an Associate Professor in the School of Technical Careers at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Illinois. Walsh has taught job hunting workshops from Washington, D.C., to San Diego, Calif.

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR JOB INTERVIEWING

Do

--Learn ahead of time as much as you can about the company. Know what goods it produces or what services it sells.

--Apply in person, and go alone.

--Be on time if you have a definite appointment—not too early, and not one minute late.

--Look your best—well-groomed and appropriately dressed.

--Apply for a specific kind of work.

--Stress your qualifications for the job you want.

--Review your past experience, training, and skills which would fit you for the job.

--Bring your Personal Data Sheet with you.

--Stress the contribution you can make and how you would be an asset to the company.

--Answer questions honestly and enthusiastically.

--Maintain your poise and self-control. Taking a deep breath will help to overcome nervousness or shortness of breath.

--Indicate your flexibility and readiness to learn.

--Be positive in your attitude.

--Make your written application neat, complete, and accurate. Be sure persons know you have given their names as references.

--Make as many applications as you can.

--Let as many people as possible know that you are in the market for a job.
Don't

--Plead how much you need a job.
--Forget to speak clearly and loud enough for your interviewer to understand you.
--Dwell on your problems.
--Hedge in answering questions.
--Misrepresent facts; bluff; or be a "know-it-all".
--Overestimate your capabilities or be one of those who can do anything.
--Try too hard to make an impression.
--Talk too much or prolong the interview when it should be over.
--Bring up the matter of wages or hours early in the interview.
--Display a feeling of inferiority.
--Argue with the interviewer.
--Balk at a request to take a physical examination.
--Feel that the world owes you a living or assume that the employer owes you a job.
--Be discouraged if the first interview is unfavorable--or the second and third.
--Shut yourself off from outside contacts who might help you find a job.
--Fail to use all the community resources which exist to your benefit.
--Give up, ever.
1. Why should I hire you?
2. Are you interested in a permanent or temporary job?
3. In what position are you most interested?
4. What do you know about our company?
5. Why do you want to work for our company?
6. Why do you like this particular job?
7. Why are you leaving your present position?
8. Would you explain this gap in your job history?
9. What were your biggest accomplishments in your last job?
10. What features of your previous job did you dislike?
11. What position do you expect to have in five years?
12. What qualifications do you have to make you successful?
13. What do you think of your last supervisor?
14. Would you object working for a woman?
15. What is the lowest salary you would accept?
16. What jobs have you held previously? Why did you leave? Did you get along with your co-workers?
17. Briefly explain the types of jobs you have held?
18. Can you take criticism without getting your feelings hurt?
19. What are your future vocational plans?
20. What are your short-term goals in employment? (long-term goals?)
21. How will you get to and from work?
22. How about overtime?
23. Could you tell me something about yourself?
24. What are your strengths and weaknesses?

25. What do you do in your spare time? Do you have any hobbies?

26. What was the last book you read, movie you saw, sport you attended, etc?

27. What subject did you like best in school?

DEALING WITH STRESS

May is National Mental Health Month, and the following are some helpful hints in dealing with stress:

- Recognize Your Emotions: Experiencing many conflicting feelings is common. Don't dwell on your feelings, but don't avoid them either.

- Deal With The Cause: Identify ways you can resolve or lessen the stress of a situation. If tension comes from a relationship with a person, talk out your differences. If tension comes from an unfinished project, restructure your time so you can get the job finished.

- Use Your Support System: Talk your problems over with someone you can trust. This can release pressure, make you feel better, help you see worries more objectively and figure out ways to handle the problem. If you don't have a support system, get one — friends, family, a clergyman, therapist, anyone you can trust and feel comfortable with.

- Let Your Emotions Out: Identify a variety of ways to express your feelings appropriately. Cry, scream, or engage in a physical activity such as jogging, cleaning, walking, gardening. Working the emotions out of your system will leave you much better prepared to deal with the problem.

- Take Care Of Your Body: Exercise and recreation are essential for good physical and mental health. Plan to do something you enjoy as part of your regular routine, even if it's just enjoying a warm, relaxing bath. Eat sensibly and get plenty of rest. When your body is run down, things look worse than they really are and your ability to cope is hindered.

- Take Pride In Your Accomplishments: Look at your past and present successes at home and at work. Be proud of the good things you’ve done.

- Take One Thing At A Time: You can't always be running at high speed so allow for rest periods. If you have a number of “must-do” jobs, tackle them one at a time, in order of their importance. Set goals and then take time out to reward yourself for a job well done.

- Realize Your Limits: Don't take on more than you can handle. More stress is caused by leaving jobs unfinished than by turning the jobs down.

- Do Something For Others: If you feel yourself worrying about yourself all the time, try doing something for somebody else. It will make you feel better as well as making another person feel better.

- Escape For Awhile: It's good to put your mind on things other than your problems. Go to a movie, read a book, listen to music or lose yourself in an activity that is removed from the stress. It gives your mind a chance to rest so that when you come back to the problem you are better prepared to deal with it.

- Don't Try To Be Perfect: Go easy on yourself. No one is perfect, so why set yourself up for failure. Give yourself credit for the things you do well. Don't expect perfection from others either. It will only make you feel frustrated, let down and disappointed when they don't meet your expectations.

- Plan For Change: Dealing with the unexpected is a great source of stress, but you do have control over some stressors. Avoid making too many major changes at one time, and try to accept and prepare for the inevitable changes. Remember to allow for an adjustment period for each change.

- Develop A Positive Attitude: If you look on the bright side of things, you won't concentrate on failure. Positive emotions help fight stress and negative ones promote and produce stress.

TEST YOUR STRESS FACTOR

Answer all questions yes or no. A ‘yes’ scores 5 points and a ‘no’ scores zero.

HOW TO ACHIEVE A GOAL

Here's a game plan of things you will do to achieve a goal. The rules you should follow to achieve your goal are:

RULE I. BEHAVIORALLY DEFINE THE GOAL.

RULE II. IDENTIFY AS MANY BEHAVIORS AS YOU CAN WHICH LEAD TO THE GOAL.

RULE III. PUT THE BEHAVIORS IN STEPS FROM LEAST TO MOST DIFFICULT.

RULE IV. GO BACK THROUGH THE LIST OF STEPS. REVISE AND REFINE THE STEPS. MODIFY THE STEPS SO THAT EACH STEP IS SLIGHTLY MORE DIFFICULT THAN THE PREVIOUS STEP. LEAVE OUT ANY UNNECESSARY STEPS. MAKE THE LAST STEP YOUR GOAL.

RULE V. SET A REASONABLE DEADLINE FOR EACH STEP.

RULE VI. STATE HOW MANY TIMES YOU WILL PRACTICE EACH STEP.

RULE VII. WORK.

RULE VIII. REVIEW AND REVISE IF NECESSARY.

RULE IX. ACHIEVE.

Add the number of checks in each column. If you have a combined total of 26 or more checks in the "All of the time" and "Most of the time" columns, you have a good attitude about life and yourself.

If you have less than 26 checks in the first two columns, look at the checks in the "Some of the time" and "None of the time" columns. These are areas that could use some development.

Some things to remember BEFORE you call:

1. Have the correct phone number.
2. Have your Personal Data Sheet with you. Who knows what you'll be asked.
3. Have a pen and paper with you to write down information. Employers don't like to "hold on just a minute" while you hunt for them.
4. Speak clearly and slowly. Make sure your brain is in gear before putting your mouth into motion.
5. Use a phone where there are no distractions such as a loud radio, TV, elephants, wrestling match, etc.
6. Be courteous and polite.
7. Do not have anything in your mouth (cigarettes, gum, tobacco, etc.)
8. When you are finished with your call hang the receiver up lightly. Don't shatter the potential employer's eardrum.

Making the call:

1. My name is ________________________________
2. I am calling about your ad in the paper for the ________ position.
3. Has that position been filled?
4. Are you still accepting applications?
5. I have had experience working at ____________________ where I did __________, __________, __________, and __________.
6. When may I come in for an interview?
7. What is the address?
8. Whom should I ask to see?
9. Thank you, I will see you at ________ on ________.

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR JOB INTERVIEWING

Do

--Learn ahead of time as much as you can about the company. Know what goods it produces or what services it sells.

--Apply in person, and go alone.

--Be on time if you have a definite appointment—not too early, and not one minute late.

--Look your best—well-groomed and appropriately dressed.

--Apply for a specific kind of work.

--Stress your qualifications for the job you want.

--Review your past experience, training, and skills which would fit you for the job.

--Bring your Personal Data Sheet with you.

--Stress the contribution you can make and how you would be an asset to the company.

--Answer questions honestly and enthusiastically.

--Maintain your poise and self-control. Taking a deep breath will help to overcome nervousness or shortness of breath.

--Indicate your flexibility and readiness to learn.

--Be positive in your attitude.

--Make your written application neat, complete, and accurate. Be sure persons know you have given their names as references.

--Make as many applications as you can.

--Let as many people as possible know that you are in the market for a job.
Don't

--Plead how much you need a job.
--Forget to speak clearly and loud enough for your interviewer to understand you.
--Dwell on your problems.
--Hedge in answering questions.
--Misrepresent facts; bluff; or be a "know-it-all".
--Overestimate your capabilities or be one of those who can do anything.
--Try too hard to make an impression.
--Talk too much or prolong the interview when it should be over.
--Bring up the matter of wages or hours early in the interview.
--Display a feeling of inferiority.
--Argue with the interviewer.
--Balk at a request to take a physical examination.
--Feel that the world owes you a living or assume that the employer owes you a job.
--Be discouraged if the first interview is unfavorable--or the second and third.
--Shut yourself off from outside contacts who might help you find a job.
--Fail to use all the community resources which exist to your benefit.
--Give up, ever.
